the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the following principles: older people should be able to live independently in their own homes; older people should be able to participate in the community; and older people should be able to access the services they need.

The strategy also sets out a number of objectives for the future of older people's services. These include: to improve the quality of life of older people; to reduce the number of older people who are in care homes; to increase the number of older people who are employed; and to increase the number of older people who are active in the community. The strategy also sets out a number of measures that will be taken to achieve these objectives.

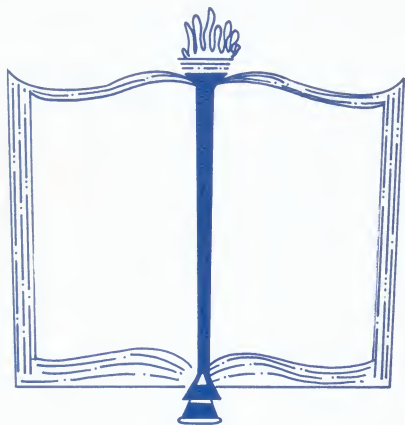

One of the measures that will be taken is to increase the number of older people who are employed. This will be done by encouraging employers to employ older people and by providing training and support for older people who are looking for work. Another measure that will be taken is to increase the number of older people who are active in the community. This will be done by providing opportunities for older people to participate in community activities and by providing support for older people who are looking for activities.

The strategy also sets out a number of measures that will be taken to improve the quality of life of older people. These include: to improve the housing of older people; to improve the transport of older people; and to improve the health of older people. The strategy also sets out a number of measures that will be taken to reduce the number of older people who are in care homes. These include: to increase the number of older people who are living in their own homes; to increase the number of older people who are living in care homes; and to increase the number of older people who are living in care homes.

These include: to improve the quality of transport for older people; to increase the number of older people who are using public transport; and to increase the number of older people who are using private transport.

The strategy also sets out a number of measures that will be taken to improve the health of older people. These include: to improve the quality of health care for older people; to increase the number of older people who are registered with a general practitioner; and to increase the number of older people who are taking part in health care.
